Pench Tiger Reserve Faces Habitat Strain Due to Spotted Deer Overpopulation

The Pench Tiger Reserve in Madhya Pradesh is facing habitat stress due to an overpopulation of spotted deer, leading to relocation efforts to restore ecosystem balance.

Key Points

- ❖ Woodland grass is a unique feature of PTR and hence, the tiger reserve spread over 400 sq km has a high density of chital or spotted deer

- ❖ The rich habitat has led the PTR to be overpopulated with spotted deer whose population has now swelled to over 40,000 in the wildlife sanctuary.

- ❖ The PTR has shifted around 2,000 spotted deer each to Kuno National Park and Satpura Tiger Reserve in Madhya Pradesh over the past two years to improve the prey base of cheetahs and tigers in these two reserve forests respectively.

About Spotted Deer:

- ❖ The spotted deer, or Chital, is the most common deer species in Indian forests.

Distribution:

- ❖ It is native to the Indian subcontinent.
- ❖ It is widely distributed in Asia, especially in India, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Bhutan, and a small group in Pakistan.
