Question 1:

Answer these questions.

- (i) Why does the poet want to know where the teachers go at four o'clock?
- (ii) What are the things normal people do that the poet talks about?
- (iii) What does he imagine about?

- (a) Where do teachers live?
- (b) What they do at home?
- (c) Who are the people with whom they live?
- (d) What were their activities when they were children in school?
- (iv) Why does the poet wonder if teachers also do things that other people do?
- (v) How does the poet plan to find out? What will he do once he finds out?

Answer:

- (i) The poet does not consider teachers as ordinary people. He feels that they are special human beings. Hence, he wants to know where the teachers go at four o'clock and what they do after school hours.
- (ii) According to the poet, normal people live in houses, freshen up after returning home, wear pyjamas, wash their clothes, watch TV, live with their parents, make mistakes, lose books, get punished, scribble on their desks, wear old dirty jeans and linen, etc.
- (iii)
 - (a) He imagines that his teachers live in houses along with their families.
 - (b) They wash their socks, wear pyjamas at home, pick on their noses and even watch TV.
 - (c) They live with their parents and other family members.
 - (d) During childhood, even they were bad, made mistakes, spelled a word incorrectly and were punished for eating chocolates in class, they lost their hymn books, scribbled on desk tops or even wore dirty jeans, etc.
 - (iv) The poet wonders if teachers also do things that other people do because he thinks that they are not ordinary but special human beings. He assumes that these teachers are always strict, never make any mistakes and are ideal in all respects.
 - (v) The poet decided to get first-hand information about his teachers by following them on the way back home so that he could find out what they do after reaching home. Once he knows what they do, he plans to compose a poem, which the teachers would then read out to their students.

Question 2:

What do you think these phrases from the poem mean?

- (i) Punished in the corner
- (ii) Leave their greens

Answer:

- (i) Punished in the corner: This phrase means getting caught for a misdeed in class and being made to stand in the corner of the classroom as a punishment.
- (ii) Leave their greens: Some children leave cooked green vegetables uneaten or throw them into the dustbin. The phrase "leave their greens" in the poem means that teachers eat green vegetables and do not throw them away.

Summary

Peter Dixon's Where Do All The Teachers Go? is a humorous account of how children are fascinated by their teachers. The poem tells us how innocent children feel that their teachers are no less than super humans who live a life far different from ours. The innocence of children comes to the fore when Peter Dixon shows how they fail to fathom that our teachers are indeed regular persons with normal lives. The poem is a testament of how children feel that their teachers are special which makes them fail to see their teachers as normal humans.

Hence, the child is left wondering about what teachers do and more importantly, where they go after school is over. Adding to the humour, the child also wonders whether teachers live in the usual houses and whether or not they do their own laundry. The child is also left wondering about whether teachers watch television in pyjamas like we do or if they pick noses like some kids do.

The child then goes on to wonder whether teachers live with families like we do. The child's curious about whether their teachers were bad kids who would skip eating their greens. Children can be troublesome and so, the kid wonders if his teachers were mischievous when they were children themselves. He wonders if his teachers too made mistakes and got punished for them. This lovely poem showcases the sweet innocence of a child.
